The American Legion Auxiliary will meet Tuesday, June 12 at 8 p. m. in the home of Mrs. Ben Edmiston with Mrs. W. H. Gunter as co-hostess. All members are urged to attend.

Nation Pays Tribute to U. S. Dairies

June is the month dedicated to the most nearly perfect food known to man—milk. With the multi-million dollar dairy industry at its peak during June, everyone is urged to co-operate through increased use of dairy foods for better health.

Upon this 20th observance of June Dairy Month, it is worthwhile to note the important role dairying plays in the nation's economy. Over 10 million people are employed in the production, processing, distribution and sale of dairy products.

Doctor's Need Qualified Secretaries

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—There's quite a turnover these days among stenographers for doctors and hospitals and it's no wonder men they have to spell words like he-patocho-langio-cystoduo—duo-demos—tomy!

That is the reason the University of Oklahoma Medical Center is offering on-the-job classes in medical terminology, hoping to head off the rapid resignations.

Medical terminology is quite foreign to most employees when they start to work here," said Mrs. Jessie Collier, administrative secretary in the Department of Surgery.

The classes are aimed at helping the secretary who takes dictation from a man who figures anybody should know how to spell chole-cysto-duo-denos-tomy and know what it means.

Simply, it means the formation of a communication between the gall bladder and duodenum.

Mrs. Collier said that one stenographer typed a report on a patient on whom an "incision" was made from the pointed chin to the Oxford.

She should have written that there was an incision from a point on the chin to the occiput, or back of the head, Mrs. Collier explained.

The course in medical spelling thus quite naturally grew out of a demand from some of the medical center workers who kept suffering pains in the occiput as the result of a deficiency of medical vocabulary.

Should Plan to Conserve Peach Supply

Over the nation, peaches are the fourth most popular fresh fruit. Only apples, bananas, and oranges—fruits that are in the stores most of the year—are eaten in larger quantities. During the months when fresh peaches are available most of us eat more of them than any of the other non-citrus fruits.

Many parts of the United States are adapted to growing peaches. Although we have several commercial growers in the county, one of the largest commercial areas closest to our own tables is Howard County, Arkansas. This year, it appears that a bumper crop will be available for consumers in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Since the peach is subject to weather and climatic conditions that often result in crop failures it would seem wise to take advantage of a year like the present and plan to conserve a supply of this fruit adequate for the coming year, or even for two years, according to Mrs. Lorraine B. Wylie, home demonstration agent.

Peaches deteriorate very little even after the second year when properly canned and stored.

As the harvesting season for peaches is comparatively short, families that will not have a home supply should make plans before the crop begins to move to purchase a quantity sufficient to supply the families' need for canning and freezing.

There are many ways of serving distinctly flavored fresh peaches to give variety to your daily menus. To many there is no recipe so tempting and satisfying as good old fashioned peaches and cream. But for those of more fastidious tastes there is fresh peach mousse, frozen in your electric refrigerator, or fresh peach ice cream, or even fresh peach pie and cobbler.

The family that conserves an adequate amount of peaches will add one of the most appetizing and easily digested fruits to their winter menus. Much work has been done in research kitchens in the development of new food products from peaches, and there are now ways of utilizing this healthful farm product besides just plain canning. For example, have you heard of peach leather? Then, too, there are excellent recipes for freezing, making jam, marmalade, conserve, juice, spiced peaches, pickled peaches, sun-dried peaches, and even peach vinegar.

Plan now to conserve lots of peaches. See your home demonstration agent for Extension Circulars on ways of using and preserving peaches.

Conventions to Be Best Covered Shows

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—While the 1956 national political conventions may not be the greatest shows on earth, they're going to be the most thoroughly covered shows on earth by television and radio.

All the networks are loaded with all sorts of engineering plans. Now comes NBC with a small gadget that could make a big stir. Convention candidates be warned. Purify your thoughts and watch your language or the Transceiver will get you.

The Transceiver is a pocket-sized two-way radio, much smaller than the "walkie-talkie" and "beep" muskymodels used in previous convention coverage. The tiny two-way unit, about the size of a woman's formal handbag, will be used by NBC reporters on the convention floor.

If the Transceiver doesn't catch you, then the new one-man portable television cameras may. These are only a bit larger than young youngsters' toy death ray gun. Cameramen can poke them into crannies of the convention halls and environs that are inaccessible to the bulkier standard studio equipment.

NEW YORK—Tenor Frank Parker, on his decision to leave the Arthur Godfrey television shows after a six-year association:

MIAMI—The Rev. Theo R. Gibson, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, on a plan to ask an end to bus segregation in Miami:

"If they (the bus company) don't come across we will call a boycott or go to the courts or both."

ST. LOUIS—Former Assistant Attorney General T. Lamar Caudle, on what he did when an attorney allegedly offered him a tax-fixing bribe:

"I was shocked. I cut him to ribbons for having bought something in my name."

Presbyterian Circle 2 will meet at Church

Circle 2 of the Women of the Presbyterian Church met on Monday afternoon in the parlors of the church with Mrs. E. M. Rowland and Mrs. E. L. Cass hostesses.

The meeting was called to order with prayer by the chairman, Mrs. T. E. Logan. Following the business session Mrs. J. A. Bemis gave the Bible study on "A Typical Jewish Home." The conversation period on "Our Part in The Seven Key Agencies" was led by Mrs. Logan.

The circle presented gifts to Mrs. W. G. Bensberg, Mrs. Cass and Mrs. Rowland who are leaving soon for Richmond, Mo., to reside.

A delectable dessert course was served to 16 members.

Mrs. Dan Pittman was hostess to WCS Circle 3 of the First Methodist Church at her home on Monday afternoon with 10 members and a guest, Mrs. Lela Hayes present.

The chairman, Mrs. J. B. Hester, presided and voiced the opening prayer. During the business session plans were made for the new church year and committee chairman were appointed by Mrs. Hester.

The program on "The Spirit of Christ for All Life and The Quadrant Goals for 1956 to 60" was given by Mrs. Adam Guthrie.

The meeting adjourned with prayer after which sandwiches, cake and Russian tea were served by Mrs. Pittman.

No, sir, the only way to assure the secrecy of anything will be not even to open your mouth. In previous conventions reporters assigned to outlying beats often had trouble in learning what was happening inside the convention hall. But not this year. NBC reporters will be provided with a new model "personal" television receiver weighing just 22 pounds and having eight-inch screens which will keep them in touch with the convention floor.

A team of more than 30 NBC news commentators and reporters will cover the conventions from caucus to ruckus. The total staff for the network will number about 400. NBC is considering insuring this expensive staff and equipment for five million dollars with Lloyd's, by the way.

Around The World

TRIPOLI, Libya, (UP)—Western observers here say the Soviet Union is helping Egypt woo strategic Libya from its Western military allies.

They told United Press staff Correspondent Joe Morris that this one-two combination may in the long run lead Premier Mustafa Ben Halim or a future government to oust Britain and U. S. forces from Libyan soil.

This would eliminate a Western toe hold in the Arab world close to Russia's exposed underbelly.

The Libyan government currently follows a difficult fence-sitting policy, trying to maintain a necessary friendship with Egypt and at the same time hold on to alliances with the West.

Libya needs Western money it gets from the military bases and its economic aid to balance its growing budget and finance development plans.

At the same time the young kingdom cannot afford to alienate Egypt, which one Western observer described as "Libya's inescapable big brother."

The struggle is about even so far despite tremendous Egyptian influence in Libya, particularly in the educational and judicial systems.

But the Russians now are in the picture.

The Russo-Libyan agreement to establish diplomatic relations was made in Cairo.

Western diplomats said Egypt strongly urged Libya to accept Russia's recent aid offer. Libya turned it down when the United States boosted its grant by $12 million over the next two years.

Egyptian propaganda is telling the Libyans that the Soviets are pro-Arab and interested only in helping them.

LONDON, (UP)—A British politician just back from Prague has disclosed that a mission from Syria is in the Czechoslovakian capital trying to buy Communist arms.

The politician, who declined to let his name be used, said a leading member of the Czech government told him no agreement has been made so far.

The Czechs let it be understood that their arms deals with countries in the Middle East were carried out in closest liaison with Moscow.

But they did not say whether their arms pact with Egypt of last September involved a single deal or a continued operation.

Cairo also has kept the West guessing as to the nature of the deal.

The information from Prague suggested that the Communists are at least toying with the idea of extending their arms business to other Mid-East nations.

CAIRO, Egypt, (UP)—Two British missionaries were expelled from Egypt yesterday for teaching the Christian faith to Moslem children.

Alan East and Miss Margaret French were believed to be the first British school teachers expelled from Egypt since the revolution in 1952.

DOROTHY DIX

He Hates Children Does He Love Her? May The Best Girl Win

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've been a widow for the past six years. I am the mother of five children and a grandmother. For the past two years, I've been keeping company with a man slightly younger, but can't make up my mind to marry him. He's a good man, a steady worker, but there are several things against him.

He despises company in the house, has no interest or hobby, such as reading or sports, and has a hatred of children.

On the other hand, I like company, adore reading and naturally love children.

I have four children at home, a boy of 10 and three teen-age girls. Naturally they have friends in to watch TV, do homework or dance. This, my friend wouldn't tolerate. He claims I'm too easy because I don't whip my youngsters. The children and I have lots of fun as a family; my friend has no sense of humor and can't share our good times.

RENEE
Dear Renee: Now, please tell me just what does this man have in his favor?

You have a fine family, a good home life. Your children are happy, so are you. Do you realize what an upheaval would be caused by your marriage? I doubt if the children would even stay—your so-called friend would certainly work hard at getting them out.

Let your youngsters have the security of their home while it's vitality important to them. Don't jeopardize it by a fleeting touch of romanticism.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm in my early forties and go with a man the same age. We've known each other three months. I love him very much and believe he loves me. I want to know if he really does.

C. L.
Dear C. L.: If you're asking me, the crystal ball is out of order. Men are usually more cautious than women in finding out they're in love, so give the poor guy a little time. Three months is a brief acquaintance.

Dear Dorothy Dix: It seems funny to some people that a girl of my age (15) could be interested in boys, but I am very interested in Perry, who is 17. We've had some dates that were lots of fun but there are a few things standing in the way of developing our friendship. He's very popular at his school, which is not the same one I attend, and his former steady is trying to get him back.

JULIE
Dear Julie: It would be funnier if boys didn't interest you! Familiarity may breed contempt, according to an old proverb, but it takes both familiarity and availability to breed friendship.

Perhaps Perry's fondness for you may overcome the obstacle of distance and the persistence of his ex-steady. Behave as you have been, offering comradeship and understanding. Extend invitations to your school's dances, picnics, to Wiener roasts your gang is giving. Make the most of vacation days, and may the best girl win—I hope!

Adlai Has the Inside on the Nomination

BY JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adlai Stevenson, after knocking Estes Kefauver into the political wilderness, has the inside track for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The main problem of the Democrats remains exactly what it was before the primaries: Will they have issues sharp enough and heated enough to make the voters want to scrap President Eisenhower for a Democrat?

Neither Stevenson nor Kefauver was able to set any prairie fires with primary campaign attacks on Eisenhower and his administration. The reasons are not hard to find.

In the first place, the Democrats this year lack the inflammatory issues the Republicans had or were able to even in the 1952 campaign: the Korean War, the "scandals," and the Communist scare.

In the second place, the bulk of the Democrats and Republicans are so close together—in following a middle-of-the-road course—that the basic differences between them are more of degree than of kind.

A foreigner or a person without emotional or political attachments to either party might have difficulty recognizing any real differences between Democrats and Republicans at all.

In the third place, the Republicans have taken over the Democrats' basic programs, thus robbing them of a lot of talking points.

For the 20 years they were out of office the Republicans preached against what they called the "creeping socialism" of the New Deal and "Fair" Deals.

But after Eisenhower moved into the White House the Republicans not only retained all the major programs of the Roosevelt-Truman years including foreign policy, but even expanded them. They repudiated none of them.

In the fourth place, the country is at peace. It is enjoying high prosperity and war with Russia seems more remote than any time since 1948 all of which makes it difficult to get voters excited.

And even one of the issues upon which some Democrats seemed to be basing a lot of hope—the charge that the administration was giving away natural resources—has been diluted.

When Democrats start talking about giveaways the Republicans can remind the voters that Southern Democrats were in the front of the fight which persuaded Congress to let the government give the states the oil-rich submerged lands.

And it was Southern Democrats who this year led the successful fight to get Congress to pass a bill taking direct federal control off the natural gas producers. Eisenhower vetoed the bill while supporting its objectives.

Guinea pigs are not pigs, they are robots.

it's you.

Thought For The Day

Philosophers have done wisely when they have told us to cultivate our reason rather than our feelings for reason reconciles us to the daily things of existence; our feelings teach us to yearn after the far, the difficult, the unseen. Bulwer said it.

Knowledge of an assassination plot turns a trip abroad into a nightmare for James Stewart and Doris Day, starring in Alfred Hitchcock's "The Man Who Knew Too Much," opening Sunday at the Saenger Theatre. Filmed in VistaVision and color by Technicolor in Marrakech and London, the suspense tale also features two songs by Miss Day.

Tall Drifter

By W. Edmunds Claussen

By W. EDMUNDS CLAUSSEN
THE STORY: Although Emmett Cash tried unsuccessfully to make an outlaw of Frank Ude, the tall drifter decides to play out his hand in Cashtown. Frank takes a job as foreman of the Rafter C, operated by Emmett's half-sister Jean.

CHAPTER XVII
Tod Drury's wrinkled face glowed from the cook stove. Here was a wind-bitten, saddle-galled cowboy grown old at his trade. "Miss Jean put you on, eh?" Frank smiled, drawing a battered captain's chair to the table. "She hooked me, Tod. Mind telling me something? What kind of volves do we face on this Cash-town range?"

"The worst blackleg kind Hungry ones."

Frank asked quietly, "When it comes to delivering the horses how many hands can I count on?"

"Three, not figuring Miss Jean or yourself. Only she'll leave Rickety to home on the drive."

"She told me to keep you behind on headquarters."

A strange, inarticulate gurgle caught in Tod Drury's throat and he nearly pulled the fly netting off the window in spinning about. "Let me look in your face. You can't be tellin' the truth! That old budzard can't no longer fork a saddle!"

"I'll probably ask Rickety to drive the wagon."

"You're a rascal, Tod," he growled and again turned to the window. "I could quit before I take such indignities as stayin' to home."

"Did you figure maybe I'll need somebody here that can handle a rifle? We don't want to return from Fort McHenry and find the buildings in ashes. You're the man."

Something happened to the planes of Drury's face; his deep-etched lines smoothed out about his mouth and a gleam crept into his eyes. "Course it wouldn't be any sense at that leavin' Rickety here. He can't no longer feed himself. His eyes are so bad she might as well leave a sick pup to guard the place."

"So it stacks up I've got two old men and a boy to help move those horses to McHenry?"

Tod's eyes bored at him. "I don't subscribe to them sentiments. One of us is Old Man Time, but it sure ain't me. I'm solid as iron." Then a little smugness crept into his voice as he turned mentally back in time.

"Rafter C has still got its friends. Vogel Cash was a good-hearted soul. Too good. He gave away more than he ever kept for himself. Could well be a couple more riders'll show up when you're ready for the horse trail."

A hundred questions dragged across Frank's mind that needed answers.

"Is she going to marry him, Tod?"

"No, I don't think so—as long as I and Rickety have guns. Took her a little while to find out how ran a man can be, but that day in Circle N ranch yard Milo Hackett showed her Norring's slick talk was all rotten. She won't marry him now."

Slowly Frank asked, "What were you doing in Norring's ranch yard?"

"Delivering her cattle."

After that a dull silence held until Frank broke it. "Why deliver Rafter C's to Norring? Had she sold stock to Circle N?"

"Suppose," Tod Drury said dryly, "suppose you were to ask Miss Jean that question?"

Jean Cash watched Norring walk into the parlor behind her. For a long period during the beginning of their friendship he had called regularly several times a week. He had become increasingly domineering, and she understood then why a certain streak within her character had rebelled against him. He came into the room now as a stranger.

Her first words were held low and soft. "It was Emmett who shot the horse from under the posseman, wasn't it. Then why blame Frank Ude? Let's be realistic, Steve."

"They were riding together. Your brother has your horses. And Ude was with him when they were stolen."

Not even Norring could he holding such a straight face. He believed what he told her, and if he believed it then it was true. This was news to her, confirming her

Frank held as much of his raw anger from his voice as possible. "Be sure you pick a better man than Milo Hackett when you try it, Norring. Ride on before I turn Rickety loose on you!"

He saw Norring throw himself into saddle and knew his thrust had cut. Norring's dark jacket flapped open revealing a white pistol handle shoved into his waistband. He sensed the banker was debating whether to reach after the gun. But he wasn't positive exactly where Frank stood. "Better not be around when Lew Chantry rides up!" He struck with his spurs and his stallion reared. Frank felt sorry for the horse. It was going to suffer for whatever Jean Cash had said.

He stopped thoughtfully toward the porch. Behind him Tod

Agents Pick Movie Stars These Days

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (M)—Want to know who discovers movie stars these days. Despite what you may have read about eagle-eyed producers, agents are the ones who do the discovering.

It's unglamorous but true. Most of young hopefuls who are signed by the studios in Hollywood are not found in drive-in restaurants or soda fountains. They are brought to the studios by alert agents, interviewed, tested and signed.

Take Felicia Farr. The legend promoted about this taffy-haired beauty was that she was tabbed for stardom by her studio while staying in a local eatery.

"Not so," says Felicia. "A friend of mine was hostess at DuPar's Restaurant in the Farmers Market. She got sick and asked me if I would take over her job for a week so she wouldn't lose it. I wasn't working at the time, so I agreed to do it."

"It wasn't the studio that discovered me; it was an agent, Herbert Gold. He asked me if I would be interested in a film career. I thought it was the same old line, so I didn't take much notice."

The agent persisted. Felicia was not exactly a tyro, having done a lot of TV commercials in New York. "I was the Betty Furness type, always opening and closing refrigerator doors," she explained.

Gold wanted to show her around at the studios, but held off until she began a play at a little theater here. She played the Kim Novak role in "Picnic," and Columbia Pictures was mightily impressed. She was signed.

Jean Herscholt is gone, but he won't be forgotten by Hollywood. No one in the town did more to help his fellow man. Yet he wasn't the sanctimonious kind of do-gooder. He took part in civic and philanthropic work out of a full heart, thankful for the advantages that living in America had given him.

Frank Parker to Leave Godfrey

NEW YORK (M)—Singer Frank Parker, one of the last veterans of the Arthur Godfrey shows, today was reported planning to quit the fold when his contract expires next month.

Parker, it was said, could have remained without a contract but would have been subject to call for appearances on the radio-TV programs on a non-regular basis.

"With no promise of work for the future, Frank feels he will be better off severing all future ties," the New York Journal-American quoted an unnamed CBS source.

Parker, 53, has been with Godfrey six and a half years, earning between $60,000 and $85,000 a year.

31 MORE VOTERS

DAVENPORT, Iowa, — (UP) — Civic leaders labored for a week in a "shoe - leather - telephone" campaign to bring out a 100 per cent vote in the Tuesday Iowa primary.

Results showed today they succeeded in bringing out exactly 31 more persons in this city of 22,000 than voted two years ago.
